

ABOUT US

Scope

Clínica Contemporánea is the first online only open access journal published by Colegio Oficial de Psicólogos de Madrid. It aims at providing with a new framework for the expression and dissemination of our professional work, where we can share our clinical and therapeutical practice, as well as the theory underlying it.

Clínica Contemporánea is a peer review clinical practice journal, unique as it covers the gap of scientific publication between empirical research and clinical practice. Specifically aimed at Spanish speaking practitioners all over the world, and open to the different theoretical models settled in our discipline, it has a plural, international Editorial Board that reflects this theoretical diversity and the different areas of intervention within the field. The journal intends to offer a space for original works that account for the broad spectrum of psychotherapeutic practice, always meeting the strict scientific criteria for scholarly articles.

The journal's main goals are:

- To promote theoretical-practical reflection by catalyzing critical analysis and scientific discussion in the field of psychotherapy.
- To contribute to the dissemination of work experiences from a clinical and therapeutical point of view, as well as from a technical and theoretical one.
- To foster communication between Spanish speaking professionals in the fields of diagnosis, psychotherapy and health.

We accept original works that present theoretical contributions and practical experiences in psychology in the areas of assistance, evaluation, prevention and health promotion, from different approaches and interventional perspectives carried out both in public and private spheres. Works can be submitted in Spanish always rigorously meeting the scientific publishing format criteria.

Peer Review Process

Clínica Contemporánea acknowledges receipt of submitted manuscripts, which are subject to a first revision by the Editorial Board in order to ensure their compliance with the journal's editorial line. If so, the manuscript is sent to two independent external reviewers, acknowledged experts in the subject, who evaluate its suitability for publishing. Double-blind peer review ensures the anonymity of both authors and reviewers. Finally, reviewers' and Editorial board's feedbacks are sent to the authors, along with the decision made by the latter, whether it is the manuscript's acceptance, rejection or an invitation to revise it. The journal can also request specific works to relevant authors so that they be published both in ordinary and monographic issues.

Frequency of publication

Clínica Contemporánea is published thrice a year, in March, July and November.

Open Access Policy

Clínica Contemporánea is a full and free open access journal, that is, there are neither charges nor fees to either authors or readers. All its contents from the first issue are available online, provided copyright is not infringed. It is thereby intended to contribute to the dissemination and exchange of scientific knowledge at a global level.

Ethical Standards

The Journal adheres to the ethical standards of the Committee of Publication Ethics (COPE) www.publicationethics.org.
